Meet the 'Johnny Cash of Catholic Music'

Singer-Songwriter Randy Albright Is a Little Bit Country and a Whole Lot of Church

BY Barb Ernster March 27-April 9, 2011 Issue | Posted 3/18/11 at 10:23 AM

Randy Albright has written top-selling songs for such legendary country-music artists as Tammy Wynette, Vince Gill, Kathy Mattea and Diamond Rio. After landing a publishing deal with Acuff Rose in the early '80s, he recorded his first million-seller song, "Christmas Memories," for the group Alabama and went on to write multiple award-winning songs that landed on the top of country-music charts.

But it is his more recent Catholic music career that has meant more to him than all the Gold and Platinum earned in Nashville. Inspired by the Divine Mercy message in 2002, he started singing his own version of the Chaplet of Divine Mercy while driving in the car one day and recorded his A Musical Celebration of the Chaplet of Divine Mercy CD two years later. After a series of referrals and phone calls, the Marians of the Immaculate Conception invited him to perform at the National Shrine of the Divine Mercy in Stockbridge, Mass., on Divine Mercy Sunday in 2005. That set him on a course of being a Catholic songwriter and singer.

"I had started walking away from country music at that time, realizing that music with more meaning was what I wanted to do. My Catholic music offered that fulfillment, and there was no turning back after that," says Albright, who has recorded two Catholic CDs, with two more scheduled for release in 2011.

After his successful performance at the shrine, he promised the Lord he would honor his Mother and wrote his second CD, a 14-song tribute to Mary. He took his music on the road in 2010, performing in parishes and at Catholic events around the country and, more recently, in the Holy Land, where he accompanied Our Sorrowful Mother's Ministry, which is based in Vandalia, Ill.

A man who likes to wear black when performing, Albright has been dubbed the "Johnny Cash of Catholic Music."

Ironically, the songwriter never even considered himself a singer until he started writing Catholic music.

"I enjoyed having other people sing my songs because I really didn't care for my voice," he says.

Yet his voice is drawing fans from as far away as Poland. And, after his 2010 tour, his CDs are getting into more people's hands and making their way onto radio stations. His Divine Mercy CD left one woman "speechless."

"What a fantastic way to start your day 17 minutes on the way to work, and the words stay with you all day," she wrote on his online guestbook.

Another wrote, "The Queen of Heaven is smiling from her abode. God bless you for sharing your talent and honoring our Queen and Lady."

Adds Father Mark Innocenti, pastor of Lady of Lourdes parish in Little Falls, Minn., who invited Albright to sing at the parish last May (and will be returning there in May for a second visit): "You can tell Randy has spent time in prayer with Mary and meditated on her place in salvation history; it shows in the lyrics of his songs. His devotion was evident to all, and his show left people inspired. ... I was impressed."

His wife Laurie, a country-music fan who gave him a lot of input on his songs, also found her professional singing voice in Catholic music; she accompanies him on tour as a backup vocalist. The couple, who reside in White House, Tenn., look at their new Catholic music ministry as a gift from God that has many spiritual benefits.

"If I'm going to be representing Mary in my music, then my life needs to be an image that reflects that," says Albright. "I lead a life of prayer more than I used to, plus I get to hang out with a lot of neat monks, priests and sisters."

Pre-Cradle Catholic

Albright was adopted at birth in 1957 by a Polish-American Catholic family in Bronson, Mich. The family was always very musical, and Albright had set a goal early in life to make his living writing songs. His adoptive mother had taught him to play the guitar and encouraged him to write his first song.

"She was trying to put me on the path that she thought I might be on otherwise," he says, which was later confirmed to him.

While growing up, his adoptive mother always told him that when he was older she had something to give him. When he finally asked her for it, she went into her bedroom and came out with an old newspaper clipping dated 1966.

There was a picture of a young lady sitting at a piano, and she had won an award. His adoptive mother told Albright that she suspected that was his real mother, because she had made a connection between the woman in the picture and the names of his godparents that were listed on his baptismal certificate.

So Albright made arrangements to meet his biological mother, a singer-songwriter who now lives in California. She was a young woman of 19 when she became pregnant with him. Her father wanted her to get an abortion, but she went to live with relatives until he was born. They convinced her to give him up for adoption.

"She had always stipulated that I had to be adopted by a Catholic family," he says. "I always say I'm a pre-cradle Catholic. Before I was born, I was destined to be a Catholic."

Hearing the truth about his mother's plight gave special meaning to the pro-life message for Albright. His song "Let Me Live" came out of him as if the Blessed Mother was right there with him, he says. The song has aired on Eternal Life Radio in Boston and has been used at pro-life events and speaking engagements by Alveda King, niece of Martin Luther King Jr.

From Nashville With Love

Albright says he doesn't miss the country-music recording industry, but it took him a few years to get used to a new lifestyle after being in it for 25 years.

"You're under a quota and have to write so many songs a year," he says. "It was really hard for me to think, Gee, I'm not writing any songs today."

There was a time in the early 2000s when country-music artists started writing their own songs and the songwriters who made their living at it were not getting recordings. The artist songs weren't selling, however, because they weren't that good, and country music went into a slump.

"When my publishing deal came up, I stepped away, and I didn't try to get another deal," he says.

Paying tribute to the Blessed Mother has drawn him even closer to the Divine Mercy, a message he lives every day.

Nashville songwriter gives honor to Mary in his new CD

Fran Rajotte, Tennessee Register

Randy Albright has always felt a special connection to the Blessed Virgin Mary, and it has expressed itself in his career as a singer and songwriter.

His latest project is the CD "A Musical Celebration of Mary," featuring songs Albright wrote, such as "Child of Mary," "Mary I Look Through You," "Hurry Mary" and "Woman Clothed with the Sun."

"Mary's dialogue with the children of Fatima let us know that our Lord wishes for His mother to be more well known and loved in these latter times. ... And in the writing and recording of my newest Catholic project and CD release, 'A Musical Celebration of Mary,' I wanted to do just that," Albright said.

"I grew up with a special devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary," said Albright. "I was born Aug. 14, 1957, to an unwed mother in Battle Creek, Mich., (who gave him up for adoption), and stipulated that I be raised Catholic."

On May 8, 1958, at 32 months old, Albright was adopted into a Polish-American Catholic family in the small town of Bronson, Mich., where he attended St. Mary of the Assumption Church and elementary school.

"Because I grew up with a special devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary, and being told that I was adopted through St. Ann's orphanage, I always saw the Blessed Virgin as my heavenly mother and St. Ann as my heavenly grandmother," he said.

He also grew up surrounded by music. Members of his adoptive family, including his mother, cousins, siblings and friends, were part of several Polish orchestras when Albright was growing up. He formed his own Polish orchestra while still in his teens. His earliest recollections of being on stage in front of a crowd were at the local area nursing homes and veteran's hospital, where they carried on a regular musical schedule throughout his childhood years.

As a youngster, his dreams of the future as a priest, martial arts teacher, country music singer and songwriter and criminologist pulled him in many different directions. He eventually decided to pursue music and at age 20 moved to Nashville.

Albright found his way to Music Row and to Christ the King Parish, a few blocks away. He attended daily Mass after delivering The Tennessean newspaper in the middle of the night, and worked on his writing, pitching songs to publishers, producers, and record companies throughout the day.

"My youthful agility and martial arts background led me quickly and quietly over the eight-foot fence daily at the Opryland Park complex for a whole season, where a number of my newfound friends and acquaintances were employed in what I called the 'dream job' of the entertainment industry," said Albright.

He landed the prestigious job in the "Country Music U.S.A. Show" the following year, imitating his phonograph mentor, Hank Williams Sr. This experience led him to more than 20 years of singing and corporate entertainment all over the country.

Albright attributes his career to the mother who raised him, bought him his first guitar at age 8, and taught him to play. "She was my biggest inspiration," he said, "and there were many who helped along the way!"

At age 9, Albright had written his first song. He has since written more than 500 songs with more than 100 of those being recorded, over half of them by Nashville's major market recording artists such as Vince Gill, Charlie Pride, Tammy Wynette, Ricky Skaggs, Emmylou Harris, Alabama, Diamond Rio, Pam Tillis, Mark Sanders and Keith Whitley. Some of his hit songs include "That's Enough of That," "Way Beyond the Blue," "The Memories Remain," "Send the Angels Down," and "Christmas Memories."

Albright founded iKahnNashville Publishing and iKahn Records in 2002, and bills himself as Nashville's Catholic record company, with the purpose of presenting to listeners a better understanding of the Catholic faith through music.

"I decided to promote iKahn Records as Nashville's Catholic Record label to proudly proclaim that we create quality Catholic music, and it has helped our music buyers to more easily find the music of their faith," said Albright.

He began his Catholic music career after being inspired to compose the music for the Chaplet of the Divine Mercy, which led him to his first CD release "A Musical Celebration of the Chaplet of the Divine Mercy." This was approved and endorsed by the Marians of the Immaculate Conception.

"My Divine Mercy composition started taking on a deeper meaning for me one day when one of the Marians pointed out that the Divine Mercy came to us from our Lord through a Polish nun, and that maybe my adoption into a Polish Catholic musical family was a part of a holy plan that was started a long time ago, and was finally being realized in my present day service to God through Mary," Albright said.

Albright also performs the songs from "A Musical Celebration of Mary" as a one-hour live show with scripted dialogue that explains Mary's role in salvation and why she is so very important to all people. According to Albright, the program is available for booking at Catholic parishes or organizations for the promotion of faith on the very topic, or for fundraising and various events. He is currently booking events for the 2009 season.

Albright is a long-time resident of White House, Tenn., with his wife, Laurie, and their three sons. He is a parishioner at Our Lady of the Lake Church in Hendersonville, where he started playing for the Saturday evening Mass in 2002.

His music can be purchased via his official music website at <http://ikahnrecords.com>, and St. Mary's Bookstore and Church Supplies in Nashville carries the new "A Musical Celebration of Mary" CD, and has carried the "Chaplet" CD. The album can also be found in the Marian catalogue online.

To book a live performance for a church or nonprofit group, contact Albright at ikahn_nashville@comcast.net or call him at (615) 285-0470.

✠ SATURDAY EVENING PERFORMANCE BY RANDY ALBRIGHT ✠

A Musical Celebration of Mary

• ST. ANN'S PARISH • 33333 MAYFAIR AVENUE • ABBOTSFORD • BC •

For over a quarter of a century his songs have graced the voices of country music legends like Vince Gill, Alabama, Diamond Rio, Alan Jackson, Faith Hill, Charley Pride, Tammy Wynette and many others. After having more than a hundred songs recorded in his career, he felt divinely inspired to compose a new melodic version of the Chaplet of the Divine Mercy. The Marians of the Immaculate Conception quickly approved and embraced it. Randy knew that though his faith had always been firmly rooted in the Catholicism that he had grown up in, his music was about to make a spiritual conversion all its own.

Randy grew up in Bronson Michigan being taught by the Felician Sisters and the Crosier Fathers at St. Mary of the Assumption school, and in light of his spiritual surroundings it is easy to see how he developed a strong devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary. "The Mother of God continues to bring me ever closer to her Son Jesus" Randy admits. After this musical conversion, Randy fulfilled his promise to Our Lord in honoring the Mother of God by giving her tribute with his 2008 CD release of "A Musical Celebration of Mary". The music from this album which was entirely self penned and self performed has captured the hearts of listeners around the world and inspired him to write his one hour show "A Musical Celebration of Mary" that is currently touring Catholic parishes , Marian symposiums and Catholic conferences around the United States and Canada. With his many LIVE performances as well as his worldwide TV appearances including EWTN's Catholic cable network, the "Marian Message" that he delivers is making him more and more sought after by Catholic parish communities, Marian conferences and symposiums, and Catholic high schools and universities. His one hour show of songs and dialogue reverently delivered and spiritually moving, leaves audiences of all ages with a deeper understanding and a greater appreciation of Mary and the important role that she plays in the salvation of mankind, bringing people closer to her Son.
